They are commonly used as baits for other fish, but they are also very delicate eating. These fish are found iD the stomach of the porpesse; an argument that the last roots lip the sand with its nose, as hogs do the ground. THE ELECTRIC OR NUMBING EEL, OR GYMNOTUS. OF this extraordinary fish, which bears a great resemblance both in shape and colour to the common eel, the following very accurate de. scription was given by the late Dr. Garden, of Charlestown, in South Carolina: The largest of these fish was three feet eight inches in length, when extending itself most, and might have been from ten to fourteen inches in circumference about the thickest part of the body. The head is large, flat, smooth, and impressed here and there with holes, as if perforated with a blunt needle, especially towards the sides, where they are more regularly ranged in aline on each side. The rostrum is obtuse and rounded. The upper and lower jaws are of equal length, and the gape is large. The nostrils are two on each side, the first large and tubular, and elevated above the surace; the other small and level with the...
