Excerpt: . . . with the air, and the dust-like debris slowly settles to the earth's surface. Number Daily Simple means will serve to effect a fairly accurate count of the number of shooting stars visible at a given place during a definite period. At a selected station in an open space erect a pole 6 feet high. Trace from it on the ground two lines diverging 45 degrees half a right angle. On each line, at a distance of 6 feet from the pole, drive a stake. Connect these stakes by a stout string 3/2 feet above the ground, and from each stake, at that height, stretch a string to the top of the pole. In Fig. 4, A is the station, Aa the pole. At distances and heights stated, the stakes Kb and Cc are connected by string bc; and strings stretch from a to b and from a to c. An observer, full length on the ground, his head at A and feet toward the stakes, scanning at his case that part of the sky which appears within the triangle of strings, abc. will see just one-eighth of all the clear sky above the horizon 30 degrees high. Eight observers so placed about A, each watching only the part of the sky marked off by his triangle of strings, would see all the shooting stars that appear in the clear sky while they watch. On a fair evening it is found...
