The day Melody Mills buried her mother was the day she vowed to save enough money to buy herself a one-way ticket out of Barbourville, Tennessee. Trouble is, she has no job, no home, and very few possessions. Enter Judge Robert McCray, the most influential man in Barbourville, not to mention the most annoying, at least in the opinion of Connor Webb. The judge wants Connor to hire Melody to manage the bed and breakfast that Connor is trying to establish in the neglected Kessler mansion. Connor can't really afford an employee, especially one he doesn't need, but he can't turn his back on this frail, impoverished woman who, for some strange reason, packs her depleted wardrobe in luggage that's worth at least half a year's wages. With both Melody and Connor working hard and exploring new options for the old Kessler estate, the launch of a promising business is just around the corner. Unfortunately people they thought they'd left behind suddenly reappear and seem determined to derail their plans. Will their love for each other be strong enough to help them overcome the challenges from their past and secure their dreams for the future?.
