By Mary Joy Breton

North Star Press of St. Cloud. Paperback. Book Condition: New. Paperback. 208 pages. Dimensions: 8.8in. x 5.9in. x 0.6in. Plunged into poverty by the Great Depression, Mary Joy tells how--after losing their home in Minneapolis--she and her family lived off an acre of land in then-rural Eden Prairie township. Volunteer work during a political campaign in 1968 led to a job offer that launched her back into the work world. Mary Joys memoir covers the ups and downs of her 27-year career in government, corporations, the University of Minnesota, and environmental organizations--rising from a secretary role to an executive level. She also tells about her 40-year marriage, her mid-life metamorphosis, and her people-to-people diplomacy experience with Russian citizens during a Volga River cruise in 1990.
